The winning group is led by Arison, the founder of the Miamibased cruise ship operator Carnival Corp. His partners include the Dankner family: Len Abramson, the founder of US Healthcare Inc.; veteran Wall Street financier Michael Steinhardt; Charles Shusterman; and Hyperion Capital Management.

Arison backed out of a previous tender for the bank last year, after some Americans in his group got nervous after the election of Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu. At the time, the group also included George Soros, Goldman Sachs, and the Claridge group, which left last month after it bought a controlling share in Koor Industries.

Little progress in probe of Ben-Yehuda bombings

By STEVE RODAN and ARIEN O'SULLIVAN

Little progress has been made in the investigation of the triple suicide bombings on Jerusalem's Rehov Ben-Yehuda, security officials said, although they bave established a clear link between the attack and the July 30 bombmgs in Mahaneh Yehnda.

Police officials said Hamas was responsible for both attacks, in which the same types of explosives, detonators and operating methods were used.

By late Friday a news blackout was imposed on most details of the investigation.

"Unfortunately, we aren't any closer to understanding the key questions of both bombings," a senior security source told The Jerusalem Post. "The questions are the identities of the terrorists and exactly who sent them."

The source said the Palestinian Authority was cooperating in the investigation. But he described the cooperation as meager and the result of US pressure on Yasser Arafat, who holds a three-way summit today with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and Jordan's King Hussein, in advance of US Secretary of State Madeleine Albright's visit

"It is a matter of too little, too late," the source said. "But compared to the Mahaneb Yehuda bombing, I suppose you can say they are doing something now." Israeli authorities are operating on two levels, security sources said. IDF sweeps are trying to nab as many Islamic militants as possible in Areas B and C, parts of the West Bank which are still under partial or complete IDF control. At the same time, the General Security Service is trying to get the PA to interrogate Hamas leaders believed to have fled to Palestinian-ruled towns. Security officials said they bad information indicating Hamas was planning more attacks. They said they are taking seriously Hamas warnings they would commit more suicide bombings by September 14, unless Israel released Palestinian prisoners.

Hamas leader Abdul Aziz Rantisi told Israeli reporters that he justified the suicide bombings as "a defense of the land and nation." He said Islamic law permits such attacks.

Rantisi said the PA was acting wisely by not carrying out mass arrests of Hamas activists. He said the arrest on Thursday night of two Hamas leaders in the West Bank, Jamai Mansour of Nablus and Mohammed Muslih of Ramallah, were unjustified, He said they were not connected to the bombings.

Last night, however, Rantisi claimed he was misquoted and would not talk anymore to "Jewish journalists. This just brings me problems from the Israeli side," he LONDON (AP) - Shattering protocol to appease her subjects. Queen Elizabeth 11 spoke to them on Friday "as your queen and as a grandmother" in a deeply personal address praising Princess Diana.

Instead of the ornate backdrop of a state room, the queen spoke standing before a first-floor window of Buckingham Palace, with crowds of mourners visible behind her in the boulevard leading to the palace.

Diana's attitude toward the media was more complex. Though she often complained about paparazzi photographers following her everywhere, she had friendly relations with some of the newspapers her brother had barred from the funeral.

On the night of her death, she had telephoned Daily Mail reporter Richard Kay before going off to dinner with her new millionaire boyfriend, Dodi Fayed. Spencer's tirade was also the most public signal that Diana's family resents her treatment hy the royals.

"It was quite extraordinary," said royal biographer Douglas Kay. "They (the Spencers) feel that perhaps the way the royal family treated Diana was reprehensible... they didn't protect her. But, on the other hand, Diana didn't want to be protected."

Spencer, the 9th earl, emigrated to South Africa in 1996 after a series of run-ins with tabloids over stories about an extramarital affair and his wife's treatment in an addiction center for eating disorders and other problems. His wife, Victoria, and their four children live apart from him in Cape Town and he now has another girlfriend.

Hitting an even more sensitive note. Spencer promised Diana that his family, while respecting the young princes' royal role, will try to ensure they are not swallowed up in protocol and formality.

"I pledge that we, your blood family, will do all we can to continue the imaginative way in which you were steering these two exceptional young men, so that their souls are not simply immersed by duty and tradition but can sing openly as you planned," he said.

Diana, in contrast to her in-laws, would hug sick people on official engagements, cuddle her sons in public, and talk openly about her emotional problems. When she and Prince Charles were divorced a year ago, Queen Elizabeth II stripped her of the title Her Royal Highness.

LEBANON DISASTER Hizbullah: We have remains of commando

Netanyahu doesn't rule out an exchange

· Hizbullah officials made it clear they would try to make use of the body parts to arrange an exchange for Lebanese held by Israel and the South Lebanese

Hizbullah teader Sheikh Hassan Nasrallah held a press conference on Friday several hours after the incident near Ansariya village, roughly midway between the port cities of Tyre and Sidon. As Lebanese soldiers displayed a crushed head presumed to be that of missing navy commando Itamar Ilya, both the Hizbullah leader and Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu suggested a deal could be Northern Command Ori Orr worked out to retrieve his remains. Chief of General Staff Lt.-Gen. Amnon Lipkin-Shahak rejected the idea that the IDF had abandoned one of its fundamental principles: not to leave wounded and dead on the battle field at any price.

"I am not familiar with the term 'at any price," Shahak told military reporters. "Everything has a price. There needed to be and there was a great effort to find the missing and the force searched for a relatively extended period of time ... for the missing soldier. The force was under fire at the time."

Shahak said the IDF called off the search at first light in order nol to further endanger the agreed that the decision to call off the search at dawn was correct. "I don't think this is a blow to principle, but a correct understanding of when the principle ceases to be a principle and becomes a problem which can kill even more people," Orr said.

Hizbullah and Israel are no strangers to the body-trade business. Last summer, working through a German mediator, Israel released 45 detainees for the remains of IDF soldiers Rahamim Alsheikh and Yosef Fink held by Hizbullah.

In Beirut, Nasrallah told a news conference that his fighters bad found body parts from two dead Israeli soldiers. "We bave parts of bodies, including four legs and half a head... which we will make use of in the framework of future swaps," Nasrallah said.

In Jerusalem, Netanyahu said he would not rule out freeing detainees in negotiating a swap for the remains.

possibilities ... we deal with every soldier, even the ones who died, as something precious ... and we bave to provide a burial in Israel," Netanyahu said.

But analyst Dr. Yossi Olment cautioned against rushing into a swap with Hizbullah.

They feel victorious and like they are riding high. This kind of deal with these kind of conditions will be seen by them as further proof of the weakness of Israel and their strength." Olmert said.

At the Beirut press conference, Hizbullah also displayed equipment, including flippers, helmets, weapons, and pouches, reportedly left in the field by the IDF force. Such pictures are often screened on Israel television - of arms and ammunition abandoned by Hizbullah gun-men after clashes with IDF or their losses. "I say to the Israelis that every town, village, or place they try to reach in order to carry out attacks, they will find not just the eyes of the night guards, but bombs in the walls, the fences, the trees, and the ground. We are always alert, waiting in every valley, on every hill, and at every junction.

"Lebanon is not the place for cbeap Israeli victories. Those days arc finished."

Nasrallah revealed that Hizbullah had beefed up security since last month's successful Hizbullah's fighting arm, the operation by an elite Golani

Brigade unit in the region of Kfour village, northwest of Nabatiya, io which senior officials of the organization and gunmeo were killed.

"Since the Kfour operation, we have been much more strict and much more careful - not only along our front lines, but also in the rear. We studied and learned from the Kfour opera-

We learned that all our important units most be protected by roadside bombs."

Nasrallah maintained that the naval commando unit was hit by a big roadside bomb that the organization had planted in the plantations around Ansariya.

A Lebanese woman and her young son were also reported killed in the crossfire during the fighting in the Ansariya area early Friday. Two Hizbullah gunmen and five from the Amal movement were reported to bave been wounded, along with as least one Lebanese Army soldier. Nasrallah made it clear that, although Hizbullah views the IDF operation as a breach of the Operation Grapes of Wrath understandings, the organization would not retaliate for the deaths of civilians by launching Katyusha rocket attacks on the Galilee, as it did last month.

"If we can kill 12 Israelis every time they breach the understandings, we will be sailsfied with a mere complaint to the monitoring group," he said.

UNIFIL was contacted in an effort to recover the missing commando's body, but the effort was overtaken by Nastallah's offer to trade, "Once it became a political issue and it was announced that the remains would be used for exchange pur poses, there was nothing we could do," said spokesman Timor Goksel.

"If anything could have been done, it would have to have been before these issues became public. A lot of efforts were expended on this, but unfortunately they didn't work," he said.

No ideal solution to Lebanese quagmire

By BARRY RUBIN

Peace on the Lebanese border can only be achieved after a negotiated agreement with Syria. That's one of the few issues on which there is a consensus across the political spectrum.

But most also agree that reacbing such a solution is very difficult, even if Israel gives far more than it is offering now.

In theory, Lebanon should exchange a quiet border for withdrawal. But Lebanon can do nothing until Syria gives permission. With no diplomatic solution, Israel has only two alternatives: Continue a military presence in southern Lebanon or withdraw to the border if the Lebanese are willing or able to block cross-border attacks. Both approaches have serious flaws. Continuing current policy means more soldiers dying, with dreadful situation.

Yet retreating to the border might be even worse, letting Hizbullah and radical Palestinian forces advance and attack more effectively, with comparable Israeli losses. Israel's allies - the South Lebanese Army's soldiers and supporters could be massacred.

The debate hinges on the Hizbullah's goal. While many Western observers like to believe its claim of only seeking to liberate south Lebanon, Hizbullah openly states that it aims to destroy Israel. This is the reason it is the sole militia not disarmed by Lebanon's government when the civil war ended.

Hizbullah - and many Lebanese would view Israel's withdrawal as a victory. Recruits would flock to a seemingly winning jihad. Even if Hizbullah stopped, it

> The picture in Lebanon is complicated by the multiple militias operating there, in many cases eager to attack Israel. There are Syrian soldiers, Lebanese infantry, Iranian Revolutionary Guards, a dozen Palestinian groups supporting or opposing Yasser Arafat, the Shi'ite Arnal, and Druse, Maronite Christian, and Sunni Moslem militias. Whatever options Israel had a dozen years ago, it is not possible to play off these factors today.

Israel learned from its 1982-1984 Lebanese experience and more recent offensives that intervention is ineffective. Recent events will intensify the debate over what to do now. Unfortunately, there's no ideal

Previous costly attacks

By ARIEH O'SULLIVAN

The IDF has lost 219 soldiers in action in Lebanon since it withdrew the bulk of its troops in 1985. These do not include the 73 servicemen killed on February 4. when two transport belicopters ferrying them to Lebanon collided. Most of the IDF losses came as a result of clashes with Hizbullah or roadside bombs. The following are some of the most costly:

August 28, 1997 - Four Golani Brigade soldiers burn to death in a brushfire after they successfully attacked Hizbullah gunmen, killing four of them. A fifth soldier later died of his wounds.

March 4, 1996 - Four soldiers are killed and nine wounded when an explosive charge detonated on the Ramim hill near Manara.

October 15, 1995 - Six soldiers are killed by a roadside bomb in the eastern sector of the security July 2, 1994 - Four soldiers are killed and five wounded in a clash north of the security zone.

August 19, 1993 - A bomb kills seven soldiers and wounds two in the security zone's western sector.

October 25, 1992 - Five soldiers are killed in the ambush of a convoy in the eastern region of the security zone.

November 26, 1990 - Five soldiers are killed in a battle with terrorists during an operation near Har Dov.

October 19, 1988 - Eight soldiers are killed and seven injured by a car bomb in the security zone. March 19, 1985 - A car bomb at the "Egel Gate" border crossing near Metulla kills 12 soldiers and

Mystery still surrounds the commandos' objective in raid

By DAVID RUDGE

Mystery still surrounds the objective of the IDF naval commando unit in Friday's abortive mission in Lebanon. According to reports from Lebanon, the area itself, near Ansariya village, is a populated coastal strip, without any obvious Hizbullah or Amal targets.

The main road leading from the south to the Lebanese capital. Beirut, runs through the area, which contains some of the country's most fertile farming land and is dotted with plantations.

The coastal area is also said to contain some of Lebanon's finest and most frequented fish restaurants, as well as bathing beaches. It was along a route running through one of the plantations that the elite IDF unit was apparently ambushed by Hizbullah, who first detonated a mine or other explosive device and then opened fire from relatively close range. The region is a distance from the so-called "front tines" of the security zone and therefore generally quiet. According to the reports, Army troops deployed there, keeping tight control over the area.

The Shi'ite villages in the region are primarily affiliated with the Amal movement, although as in other parts of Lebanon in general, and the south in particular, there is a large presence of Hizbullah supporters and activists among the local populace.

Amal maintained in statements that the target of the elite IDF unit was one of its command centers in the Ansariya village area.

Other reports said that the naval commandos had intended to kidnap leading Shi'ite cleric Sheikh Abdel Amir Kabalan, who is affiliated with Amai and is vice-president of the Supreme Shi'ite Council of Lebanon. Kabalan has a home in Ansariya.

Amal leader Nabih Berri said the abortive attack was in retaliation for recent actions by Amal "resistance fighters" in the Wadi

Four Amal gunmen were killed in a clash with Golani Brigade troops in the Wadi Saluki area last week. The Golani soldiers were claimed the lives of five of them. Veteran Lebanese observers expressed skepticism over Amal's claims, however, maintaining that Amal retains only a haphazard fighting arm which poses little threat to the IDF or SLA in the security zone. Furthermore, they said the claim that the target was Sheikh Kabalan is illogical, given Kabalan's moderate stance and the fact that he made no effort to hide his move-

Hizbullah leader Sheikh Hassan Nasrallah, for his part, maintained that there were no Hizbullah or Amal targets in the area of the commando operation. In an apparent contradiction, however, Nasrallah said Hizbullah planted explosive devices around those areas and units it felt necessary to protect. This would indicate that Hizbullah did have something or someone to protect in the

On the other band, Hizbullah may have been playing a disinformation game from the start, 10 give the impression it had some-

up an ambush in the event the bait was taken.

Amal, according to an eyewitness account from one of its gunmen, only got into the picture when its activists heard the explosions and the sound of shooting. Similarly, the Lebanese Army was not, apparently, involved from the outset. It reportedly concentrated mainly on firing mortars at the troops on the ground and anti-aircraft guns at IAF helicopters and warplanes, when they came into the picture, after the initial clash.

UNIFIL spokesman Timor Goksel, himself a veteran Lebanese observer who has been with the peacekeeping force virtually since its inception in 1978, was at a loss regarding the IDF's objective in the area. "This is a densely populated area with a tot of people moving around. The Israelis must have been convinced that there was a very attractive target, whatever it might be, in this area, to sanction and clear what was an extremely high-risk operation," said Goksel.

Capt. (res.) David Schick, deputy commander of Shayerer 13 (the elite naval commando unit) between 1988-91, took part in numerous com-mando operations in Lebanon in the 1970s and 1980s. He retired from the IDF in 1995.

When II commandos are killed in a raid, what does this do to a relatively small unit like Shayetet 13?

This is a big crisis that has all the makings of a tragedy. It has to recover quickly. It has to get to operations. It has to bring in new comman-ders. I don't think it should be given time to recover. It has to return to activity immediately. But does Shayetet 13 have enough people else. It has great capability. It just has to use it. Reports have it that the force was immediately spotted. Does the lack of surprise immediately place commandos in danger?

Commandos are not meant to stay in the area. Their purpose is to complete their mission quickly and move on. Their role is heavily dependent on the intelligence they receive. In my opinion, a double agent informed Hizbullah that an operation would take place. When there is no element of surprise, there is nothing you can do.

Apparently, it was a planned ambush. The Shayetet has become active in Lebanon after years of relative quiet. Does this endanger its continued operations.

In December 1988, there was a big operation involving the Golani Brigade and the Shayetet, and it did not succeed. The result was that for many years, it didn't do anything. But the The problem is intelligence. In the aftermath of this incident, they might change their methods, and then the Shayetel might not be used for a while. That would be a shame, however, for this unit is better than infantry units. Unlike the infantry, the naval commandos can operate on the sea and on land.

Reports say that the first helicopter took 30 minutes to land to rescue the commandos. Is that a long time?

The commandos work far behind enemy lines, so it is difficult to rescue them. This is the fastest time possible. To have a helicopter even 10 km, away would have signalled that there was a military operation underway. The commanders could have decided to keep a helicopter flying over the sea and it would have gotten to the scene in five minutes. But they didn't want to do it.

What went wrong?

By ARMEH O'SULLIVAN

It has grown abundantly clear over the weekend that the elite naval commandos who died in Lebanon did not simply have a stroke of bad luck, and didn't run into a Hizbullah force by chance. Hizbullah was waiting for them and proved able to deal the IDF a kind of hlow that the armies of Egypt, Syria, Jordan and Iraq have never managed to do: eliminating one of the IDF's best trained units. Maj.-Gen. Gabi Ofir has been charged with the task of figuring out where the Shayetet 13 commando unit went wrong. He has been instructed to collect evidence and information from those who planned the aborted raid and obtain testimony from the very few who survived.

There seems to be little chance that the well-trained, highly-motivated and experienced comman-dos could have done anything to give themselves away. While there is a possibility that a charge carried by a commando went off accidentally, thus alerting Hizhullah guards to open fire, a more likely explanation appears to be that the IDF was drawn into a trap.

with you

Intelligence gathering is one of the areas Ofir will have to examine closely, to find out whether the IDF was given bad information or. whether a local agent set the IDF up for failure,

The intelligence may also have underestimated the size and alertness of the enemy. Or, could there have been a breech of security?

More than just pinpointing whether the disaster was caused hy faulty intelligence, the IDF will oeed to answer some serioos questions. For example, how did Hizbullah, whose combatants oumber in the hundreds. get our hest soldiers? Could it be that today's military isn't as comhat-ready as it ooee was, since it hasn't fought a full-fledged war in 15 years? What is elear is that the IDF needs to come clean this time, in. investigating what happened, par-ticularly after experiencing so many disasters within a relatively short period: the deaths of five Golani troopers in a fire set apparently by IDF gunfire in Lebanon 10 days ago, and the deaths in February of 73 servicemen in a collision of helicopters that were ferrying the troops to Lebanon. The army can no longer afford to pay such a dear price when it initi-2 ates bold commando action, given the growing discontent at home about the continued IDF involvement in Lebanon.

"This week and this funeral taught the queen a big lesson: Diana was a higger star than she wanted to realize. Wade said. They rewrote the book totally

The PA cabinet claimed Friday that Jewish extremists "responsible for the killing of Rabin" carried out the Ben-Yehuda attack.

"The attack in Jerusalem was committed by Jewish extremists against the peace process, and they received help from extremist sources around the world and from within Israel," a PA cabinet statement said. "The Netanyahu government is deceiving the nation in hiding such information from them."

The Palestinian Cabinet said Israel was seeking a pretext to avoid implementing a further redeployment, which was scheduled for September 7. The statement said the Israeli fight against terrorism will not succeed as long as there is no progress in peace efforts with the Palestinians.

Rather than say the truth, Netanyahu prefers to place the responsibility on Arafat," the cab-

Information Minister Yasser Abed Rabbo condemned Labor

Party chairman Ehud Barak's support for the option of having IDF troops enter PA-controlled areas to arrest suspects. He accused Barak of speaking like Netanyahu, and thus losing his standing as an alternative leadership.

Since Thursday's bombings there have been various media reports about a possibility of Israeli security forces entering Area A to raid terrorist hideouts. The Oslo Accords would permit such an action, but Israel has refrained from doing so in the past.

National Infrastructure Minister Sharoo told Channel 1 that although Israel has been reluctant to use this option, security forces should realize they can no longer rely on Palestinian security or intelligence to prevent tragedies.

Meanwhile, the IDF announced last night it was easing the closure somewhat. Starting this morning, the army said, Palestinian workers will be allowed to reach industrial parks joiotly established by Israel and the PA. These include a park at the Erez Junction and several along the Green Line in the West Bank, the IDF said.

On Thursday night, security forces arrested 69 Palestinians in the West Bank as suspected members of terrorist organizations. The IDF Spokesman said the Palestinians were being questioned by the GSS.

Former Mossad chief Shabtai Shavit told Channel 1 yesterday that despite speculation that the terrorists who carried out Thursday's attack may have came from abroad, Arafat and the PA are responsible. "We must realize that he does nothing to prevent terrorism," he Shavit added that it would be interesting to determine whether each terrorist detonated his own explosives or whether they set off one another. Shavit said that despite claims that March's blast in Tel Aviv's Apropo cafe was a "classie" suicide bombing, there was a possibility raised that the bomb could have been detonated by a second person, and that the suicide bomber had a dummy detonator on his person.

Arafat must first eradicate terror infrastructure

By SARAH HONIG

No more territory will be handed over to the Palestinian Authority if it does not eradicate the terror infrastructure in the areas under its

This was the key operative decision to emerge from a special session Friday of the security cabinet, convened following the Rehov Ben-Yehuda suicide bombing on Thursday.

The decision means there will be no second phase redeployment nor any other redeployments, if no drastic change is perceived in the way the PA deals with the terrorists operating in its domain. This means that the Oslo process would grind to a halt.

The cabinet statement opened with a declaration that Israel will "fight to secure personal safety for its citizens in full accordance with its basic right to self-defense."

It goes on to accuse the PA of having utterly failed to fulfill its end of the bargain and stresses Israel's demand that the PA keep its commitments.

So long as "the PA does not abide by its commitments, there is no possibility to continue down the road of handing over more and more territory to the PA."

However, if a change of attitude on the PA's part manifests itself. then "negotiations should resume in order to secure a final status agreement with adequate security arrangements," the statement said. Speaking to reporters shortly Prime Minister after the defense cabinet adjourned, Binyamin Netanyahu noted that "at this very time we are marking the fourth anniversary of the Oslo Accords. During all these years the PA has done nothing to live up to its most basic undertaking under these accords, namely, that "The latest outrage in Jerusalem, for instance," Netanyahu continued, "was not the act of individual crazed fanatics. It took dozens of terrorists to pull this off. The explosives had to be prepared, the bombers had to be trained, outfitted, readied and transported. The site to be hit had to be selected and reconnoitered. All this demands a well-developed infrastructure.

"We already have leads in our investigations and they all point to Hamas, and not to a Hamas base in far-off Tibet, but right near us in the PA areas. We know the Hamas infrastructure is there. Why would we theo hand over yet more land to the PA? So that it, too, would be turned into a terror base?" Netanyahu asked.

Jerusalem's Beo-Yebuda pedestrian mali was a strange blend of screaming and silence on Alongside a tree near the intersection of Hahistadrut Street, people stood and argued: soldiers with civilians, old people with young, secular with religious. It was loud, it was heated and it was all political.

"We should throw them out!" screamed one elderly woman, referring to an enemy that there seemed no longer any need to identify. "Just give them a state of their own and let's forget about them."

"And then what happens?" answered a college-age youth. "Give them a state and they'll start a war against us!" "lt's time for Gandhi!" yelled someone else, a

Hundreds of mourners attended the funerals io Jerusalem oo Friday of three of the four people killed in Thursday's triple suicide-bombing on the Ben-Yehuda pedestrian mall. Yael Botwin, 14, who had just begun ninth grade at the capital's Omanuyot religious high school of the arts, was buried on Har Hamenuhot. Eight years ago she had made aliya with her parents from Los Angeles, three years ago her father died.

Busloads of classmates and friends from the religious scouts movement joined some 400 people at the cemetery, where they stood holding on to one other and sobbing. Many of her schoolfriends talked about her goal to continue studying drama, a subject she loved.

Botwin was eulogized by Amatzia Levy-Hevroni, the principal of her former school, the Yehuda Halevy State Religious School. Jerusalem Mayor Ehud Olmert, Deputy Religious Affairs Minister Yigal Bibi, and MK Opher Pines were present, but the family requested the politicians to refraio from eulogies. The funeral was closed to the press.

At the Omanuyot school on Friday, teachers talked with pupils about the loss of their schoolmate and ways to cope with the tragedy. Many who did not know Botwin or her family nevertheless attended the funeral io solidarity. Huodreds attended the funeral of Sivan Zarka, also aged 14. "You were a fresh flower, a Fellow pupils from Rehavia's Gymnasia High School lingered at the site, sobbing and trying to comfort one another. "It is very hard for us, we are unable to conceive the enormity of the loss." said one. "Only yesterday she was smiling in school."

Leah Bar-El, headmistress of Geulim Aleph, the school where Zarka studied before starting high school, called her "the jewel in our crown." Zarka is survived by her parents and a brother.

Rami Kozashvili, 20, had made aliya with his parents from Georgia in 1994. Friends from the Neveh Ya'acov neighborhood where they lived said he worked hard in order to support his unemployed father and mother, who worked as a cleaner. For some months he had been working at the Ben-Yehuda Bazaar and was standing outside the store when the first explosion went off, sending a piece of shrapnel directly into his heart.

"He had a true Georgian temperament that was valued by his friends, because of his dedication to his mother and father," said his close friend, Avi at the funeral. Rami is survived by his parents

CALCUTTA (Reuters) - The world bowed in homage to Mother Teresa yesterday as India cast tradinon aside and decided to hold a state funeral for the tiny saint of Calcutta's sturns.

World dignitaries and common citizens offered a flood of tributes to the memory of the Roman Catholic nun who, frail in frame but iron in will, sent a message of hope to millions of destitute and ill who knew her simply as Mother.

"Mother Teresa marked the history of our century," Pope John Paul said in Rome. "She served all human beings by promoting their dignity and respect, and made those who had been defeated hy life feel the tenderness of God."

The wizened but revered Mother Teresa died of a heart attack on Friday in her Missionaries of Charity headquarters in the crowded Indian city of Calcutta, Kipting's "City of Dreadful Night" which Mother Teresa made home for most of ber 87 years.

"I can't breathe anymore," were her last words before she sank back on her bed and expired, witnesses said. Thousands of her followers, many in tears, converged on Mother House, the headquarters of Mother Teresa's network of homes for the sick, dying and poor in some 115 countries.

"Mother, you are immortal," "Mother, you will always remain in our hearts", read two placards held by students in white uniforms who stood in a monsoon drizzle.

Police behind barricades kept most of the faithful out in the rain while nuns gathered in an upstairs room around Mother Teresa's body, some touching her exposed feet.

Dressed in her traditional white sari with blue trim, her face ashen and her hands crossed, Mother Teresa's embalmed body lay on a table covered with white sheet and flowers.

Prime Minister Inder Kumar Guiral's cabinet broke with protocol and decided to accord Mother Teresa a state funeral on September 13 when she is to be buried at her religious order in Calcutta.

"Mother Teresa was a personification of mercy and compassion, reaching out to alleviate the suffering of millions the world over," the cabinet said in a resolution. "India has lost one of the greatest social workers of all time." "A ... beacon of light and hope, for millions of poor has gone out of our lives," Guiral said, saying God had come in the form of the poor to test people's hearts. "Gandhi and Mother in this century demonstrated to us the beauty and power of this ultimate and most difficult form of worship." The cabinet ordered a day of state

Remembering a humble, saintly woman

By GRANVILLE WATTS

NEW DELHI, (Reuters) - It was on a sunny morning in Calcutta on October 17, 1979 that I broke the news to Mother Teresa that she had won the Nobel Peace Prize.

Her response was typical: "I am unworthy." I had flown from Delhi to Calcutta after Reuters received a tip-off in Oslo that the she had been awarded the international honor for her work among the poor in the Calcutta slums.

Together with a Visnews cameraman, we made our way through Calcutta's back streets to Mother Teresa's missionary neadquarters. We waited there until Mother Teresa, then 69. arrived back from a hospital with a sick nun.

When I broke the news of the Nobel award to her, she was quiet for a while and said:

Thank God for his gift to the poor. God's blessing will be with the people who have given the prize.

"I hope it will be the real means of bringing peace and happiness in the world of today." Asked how she felt to win such a prestigious award, she replied: "Personally I feel unworthy. But I feel a gift has been given because people will be more aware of the condition of the poor."

The Visnews cameraman had been filming our conversation, but whispered to me: "I don't think the light is good enough in bere." When I explained the difficulty, Mother immediately agreed to do the interview again in the sunlight outside. "I am unworthy," she

the tiny saint of the Calcutta gutters.

We went with her when she visited one of her homes in the city where food was served from huge pots to 7,000 hungry people. You could not see the end of the queue of ragged people carrying bowls.

The home also housed abandoned babies and unwed mothers.

I remember one terribly deformed small girl crawling along the floor and clutching at the bem of Mother's white sari.

"Ah, it's you," she said, bending down and embracing the child. To us she said: "My nuns found her as a baby in the dusthin." As the world's press began descending on Calcutta, Teresa smiled and quipped: "I am going to hide somewhere."

Tragic lessons

nce again, the nation is united in mouming. First, for the four young victims of Thursday's callous and cowardly attack against civilians enjoying the late-summer sun on the Ben-Yehuda pedestrian mall in downtown Jerusalens. And then, as the country awoke, bracing itself for the funerals of three 14-year-old girls and a 20-year-old man, came the bitter news of the deaths of 11 naval commandos, killed in the dark hours between Thursday and Friday when a daring military operation outside he security zone in south Lebanon went tragically wrong.

President Ezer Weizman, as he so often does, found exactly the right words when visiting the wounded soldiers from the botched operation. While acknowledging the pain felt by the whole country, reeling from the double-blow of a terrorist carnage and a military failure, Weizman called on the nation not to fail into a mood of helplessness and despondency. "If we throw up our hands and say we've had it, this could be a national crackup... We must stand firm, despite all the criticism. We must keep our nerve." Weiznian declared. The president was also correct in maintaining that, without talks with Syria, no solution is in sight in Lebanon. Uotil then, he stressed, Israel has no option but to continue fighting Hizbullah as far away as possible from Israel's border settlements.

It is important that last week's tragedies, while joined together in macabre timing, are treated both by Israel's leaders and its people as two separate incidents. Although the country mourns for the 15 dead with a sadness which knows no difference between the youngsters blown to pieces on the pedestrian mall and the soldiers killed in Lebanon, their tragic deaths have different lessons and implications.

The cabinet on Friday was quick to decide oo the immediate implication of the Ben-Yehuda terror attack: No more territory will be handed over to the Palesunian Authority until the PA proves itself in the fight against Islamic terror.

This decision will bave takeo oo one by surprise - indeed, the only surprise would have been had the cabinet decided otherwise. In a wide-ranging interview conducted a day before the Jerusalem attack and published in Friday's Jerusalem Post, Prime Minister Bioyamin Netanyahu spelled out clearly his diplomatic agenda on the eve of Secretary of State Madeleine Albright's first visit to the region. Without genuine and effective PA action against the terrorist structure within its domain, the prime minister said, it will be impossible to implement the further redeployments stipulated in the Oslo Accords and subsequent Hebron

Thursday's suicide bombing left the prime minister with little option but to announce the suspension of the redeployment timetable. It will be Albright's job this week to persuade Arafat that his moment of truth has arrived, and that the fate of Oslo lies for now solely in his bands.

There should be no such quick decisions coocerning the IDF's role in south Lebanoo, despite the growing calls for an immediate Israeli withdrawal from the security zone. The deaths of the soldiers stemmed from an operational decision on the IDF's part, not from the fact that there is an armed Israeli presence on Lebanese soil.

The conclusions which oeed to be drawo from this tragedy should be limited to a narrow military assessmeot of why this particular operation went so badly wrong, and the general cost and effectiveness of behind-the-lines raids in Lebanese territory. The strategic question of whether Israel should remain in Lebanoo, unless the secretary of state finds an hitherto undiscerned mood of moderatioo in Damascus, will remain on the table for some

Candles in the wind

i has been a sad week for the poor, the sick, and the maimed of the world, who have lost two crusading champions - first Princess Diana of Wales, and now Mother Teresa of Calcutta. The two women could scarcely be more different, yet it is for their trolikely similarities they were both loved and will both be missed.

Diana was young, tall, beautiful, rich, and worldly. Teresa was aged, tioy, plain, poor, and ascetic. Yet in entirely different circumstances. both used almost the same words to enunciate their mission in life. In ber famous Panorama program interview with the BBC, Diana spoke of her need to reach out to those who felt unwanted, unloved, and worthless, because despite her supposedly fairy-tale life, she too had been in these depths.

Teresa 10 years earlier had made a startlingly similar plea, during her Nobel Peace Prize ceremony, for help in her ministry to those born on life's scrap heap - the poor, unloved, unwanted, and deemed worthless. Britain yesterday bid farewell to Diana, an adopted royal, in one of the greatest manifestations of spontaneous national mourning the world has witnessed this century. In an entirely different setting, we can expect India to bid an equally sincere good-bye to the adopted foreigner, Mother Teresa, in an unprecedented state

For mose who seek meaning in the way the unlikely paths of Diana and Teresa crossed, first on the same missioo to humanity, and agaio in death - there was another unlikely coincidence. When the young Teresa left Albania to become a oun in Dublin, she was convinced her religious vocation was to be a teacher 10 young upper-class women. She was drawn instead to helping the world's most wretched, and it was 65 years before she befriended and admitted greatly admiring a young upper-class woman, Princess

Many mysteries remain about the world's response to these two remarkable women. Diana seemed too childlike, compassionate, and caring to be a royal fashion and glamor icon, Teresa seemed too tough, clever, and wily in her handling of the media and world leaders to be a remote saint. Somehow, with mysterious alchemy, they both seemed to have tapped a deep weariness with spiritually barren cynicism and materialism in our modern

In her low days. Diana considered herself worthless. Mother Teresa said all she had ever owned was two saris and a prayer book. From two different universes, they spoke with one voice. The poor, the sick, and the lonely are today a little poorer. But maybe they have a little more

Moral inequivalence

Dear Secretary Albright;

peace strategy. You had planned to turn the screws on us this week, after Dennis Ross convinced Yasser Arafat to make the requisite minimalist noises about fighting terrorism and the PA has put oo an amateur show of renewed security cooperation. But Arafat's embrace of the Hamas and the subsequent Ben-Yehuda bombing have thrown off that political calculus. Nobody here would take you seriously.

So what's left in the American diplomatic arsenal? The only real ammunition you've got is the threat to withdraw from active engagement in the process - to leave us and the Palestinians sinkiog in ever-dangerous Mideast quicksand with no Uncle Sam to play lifeguard or referee, Indeed, it would be easy for you to wash your hands of all this for a while, and let us stew in our own juices. But such a 'plague on both your houses' approach would be wrong, tactically and morally.

Tactically, a US pullout would lead directly to more rounds of bus bombings and even worse violence. This would kill whatever constituency for conciliation with Arafat still exists in Israel. Our response would be tougher than ever, breeding even more Palestinian rescotment and violence - and we'll all sink even further into retaliatory cycles of hatred. All that pain wouldn't make people more si oruve o compromise; it would dash confidence in the process and harden negotiating positions.

Backing away from the process would be wrong, as well, because it implies a moral symmetry between us and the Palestinians equal punishment for two stubborn little boys. Now I understand that "evenhandedness" is an important diplomatic posture for a mediator. But bear in miod, Madame Secretary, that there's litile moral equivalence between Palestinian and Israeli behavior. The Palestinians may not be enamored of the fact that we're building bomes in and around Jerusalem, or that Netanyahu isn't going to choke off the natural growth of Israeli settlements over the Green Line. But when the process takes a downturn, we're not planting bombs in their markets or kidnapping their children. The Arab builders, plumbers and electricians working on my home will still come to work - I'm not going to slaughter them - while I wouldn't dare step foot in a Gaza or Nablus neighborhood.

The Arab builders still come to work we're not going to slaughter them while I wouldn't dare step foot in a Gaza or Nablus neighborhood

Only here will a grass-roots peace movement take to the streets to encourage the democratically elected government to press ahead with reconciliation, despite it all. Even if there were a Palestinian Peace Now equivalent (there isn't yet, unfortunately), Arafat would never let it opeoly criticize his policies.

Moreover, most of us Israelis attempt to avoid dehumanizing, racist defamation of the 'other side,' even if we repudiate certain Palestinian leaders or their selfproclaimed 'rights.' None of us recently have accused the Palestinians of distributing cancer-bearing food products and hormones that barm male virility (PA Deputy Minister of Supplies Abdel Hamid al-Qudsi); talked incessantly of taking revenge against Palestioian 'dogs' and 'wolves' (two favorite images for Israelis on the Voice of Palestine and in PA Mufti Ikrama Sabri's Friday sermons on the Temple Mount); or suggested that we were being infected with AIDS by the other side.

Yes, believe it or not PA representative Nabil Ramlawi told the UN Commission on Human Rights in Geneva that "Israeli authorities in jected Palestinian children with the HIV virus." And, I haven't yet menuoned Arafat's thinly veiled calls for violence or winks and kisses for the Palestinian jthadniks.

NO, there's no parity in the Palestinian-Israeli ethical equation. Even when trying to be an honest broker for peace, take into account that Prime Minister Netanyahu's recalcitrance isn't synonymous with Arafat's confrontationism and calumny. The peace progress and regional stability are central to US Mideast policy, but so are the moral bonds between the US and Israel. The integrity of the process is not everything - not at all costs and not under all circumstances.

And one more thing. The transparcot "revolving-door" arrest gimmick - whereby the PA paramilitary casually brings in a cou-ple of Hamas buddies for a temporary layover in detention, only to be released shortly after when the press is no longer looking won't wash any longer. Especially since the lines between Hamas terrorists and the iocreasingly are becoming blurred.

It sounds banal because it's beeo said so many times, but we won't take more 'risks for peace' unless our Palestinian neighbors act like the partners in peace they're supposed to be.

Lately, it's bard to tell our friends from our enemies down in Gaza (or in Cairo, for that matter.) Perhaps you can help us sort them

Cleaning our consciences

he dinner discussion focused on the case of the Yemenite children who disappeared in the early years of the stale. Why, it was asked, are the people responsible for the kidnapping and forceful adoption of children still unaccountable for their actions? Surely, we continued. it is time for the state to stand up, admit past injustices. and place those responsible on

But, it was argued, the present government would not be able to undertake such accon. What sort of punishment could be meted out to people in the last years of their tives? It would be impossible to send people in their 80s to prison.

Better, it was suggested, for the government to simply let the issue drag on for another few years, uotil no survivors remained. Only then would the state feel free from any constraints and would it be prepared to make a public apology, perhaps even establish a museum or other national monument in memory of the missing children.

An uneasy silence. The significance of what had just been said was clear to all of the discussants, Where had we heard a similar argument, one which was, and continues to be, totally rejected out of hand?

Throughout Europe, particularly in Britain, it is heard over and over again concerning the bringing to trial of the few remaining Nazi war criminals. Why, the governments argue, bring to trial a few frail, elderly pensioners 50 years after the event? Let bygones be bygones.

The response was immediate. How can such a comparison be made? As terrible as the events surrounding the disappearance and kidnapping of Yemenite children was, this can in no way be compared to the evils of the Nazi torturers. Nothing can ever be compared to the singular act of bestiality which took place in Europe. It is a different league altogether. It is ool worthy of comparison.

Some will see the comparison and others will oot. But while the specific situations are vastly different, the dilemmas and moral questions which are raised bear comparison.

It is time for the state to publicly apologize to the Yemenite community for the disappearance of its children

ALL too often, we fail to learn from the experience of other societies. How many of us, for instance, are prepared to make the comparison between Israel holding negotiations with former terrorist leaders and the recent British decision to hold talks with members of Sinn Fein? The immediate reaction is 10 dismiss the comparison because the two situations are so vasıly differenı.

But perhaps they are more similar than we like to admit. From an Israeli or British perspective, we are talking to people who, by our own definitions, were engaged in past terrorist activities - regardless of whether we support the cause of one, while rejecong the cause of the other.

We have a tendency to see everything that relates to our own Jewish and Zionisi experience as being unique, not comparable with any other situation. We do not like the suggestion that perhaps we have something to learn from the experience of another country undergoing similar dilemmas.

The Holocausi remains unique. but the basic moral question concerning how we deal with the perpetrators 50 years on is not vastly different from the one that would face us if we decided to bring the suspected child kidnappers to trial. The sad fact remains that an evil act, a national blemish, was perpetrated against the Yemenile immigrants in the 1950s - not by murderous Nazis, but by fellow lews in whom the new and inexperienced immigrants had placed their trust and Perbaps what is needed is some form of "truth" committee, similar to that which is taking place in South Africa at the moment (another difficult comparison?), one in which the surviving actors would own up to their guilt and then receive a public pardon.

A continuation of the present situation, one committee of investigation followed by another - and another - without any concrete action taking place is not a solution. The ooly beneficiaries of these indecisive steps are the Uzi Meshulams of this world.

The state too, regardless of which party is in power, must make a clean breast of this affair. It must make a public apology to the Yemenite community on behalf of the Jewish people. Only in this way can our collective consciences even begin to be cleansed.

Talking against time in a 'placeless place'

the Holocaust has been the professional focus of Michael Berenbaum's life for 30 years, as student, teacher, scholar, author, journalist, administrator and key figure in the creation of Washington's US Hnlocaust Memorial Museum.

To survive meotally and emotionally, he has learned one lesson: "The only way to deal with death is to be immersed in life."

For the last six months, Berenbaum, 51, bas been immersed in shaping his new job as president and chief executive officer of the Survivors of the Shoah Visual History Fnundation. The fnundacion was established three years ago by filmmaker Steven Spielberg, after he directed Schindler's List. to videntape eyewitness accounts of the Holocaust and create the largest multimedia archive of survivor testimonies ever assembled.

Its accomplishments so far are impressive: Close to 32,000 interviews,

'A museum is a place to which you bring people. Our task is to bring experience to people.'...

each averaging two hours but sometimes lasting up to five bours, have beeo completed in 29 languages and 44

Some 400 new interviews are being added each week.

Yet the massive project is falling short of its self-proclaimed goal, which was to complete 50,000 interviews by the end of this year.

Berenhaum accepts responsibility for the shortfall. He ascribes it to changes lo interviewing techniques be has initiated, and to pushing beyond the boundaries that were originally set.

"We have retrained our interviewers," says Berenbaum, citing one example in which a slight change in approach can yield surprising results.

We are currently interviewing people in their sixties, who were children during the Holocaust," he says. "In talking to one woman, we might have perspective by requesting, "Take me around the family table during a Shabbat dinner. Where did your father sit? Where did your mother sit?"

Suddenly, Berenbaum recalls, the woman's face took on a Shabbat-like radiance; she started sounding like a seven-year-old as she relived the actual setting and experience.

The foundation is also seeking out interviews among survivor groups that have, until now, heen reluctant to parocipate, such as baredim.

"They are deeply suspicious," says Berenbaum, They don't know who Spielberg is, they distrust Hollywood." Berenbaum, however, went to New York and managed to persuade nne of the "great Hassidic masters" to talk to him. Their first session lasted more than five hours.

The most painful thing for him to talk about was the first time he had to vinlate Sbabbat by being on a train tak-iog bim to Auschwitz," says Berenbaum. "But be also spoke with great warmth about a Refnrm Jew, a Hnngarian and fellow inmate, who managed to make potato soup for bim each day so that he could keep kosher." Wheo there are no Jewish survivors from a certain location, a more roundabout approach is now being taken. "For instance, in the Belzec extermination camp in Poland, 600,000 Jews were killed within 10 months by a staff of 42 Germans and 102 Ukrainians," Berenbaum notes. "There were only five survivors of Belzec, and they are all dead. The only witnesses left are the Polish laborers wbo worked in the camp. I was in Poland last mooth to arrange to inter-

Berenbaum is also turning to other groops of Holocaust victims, in what he calls his "expansion category" -Jehovah's Witnesses, Gypsies and German male homosexuals.

Through these witnesses, we can learn what was singular to the Jewish experience and what we shared in common with others," he explains. After raising $45 million, the foundation is now launching a $50 million fund drive.

"To reach the goal, we have two enormous assets and one ecormous liahility," says Berenbaum.

The first asset is the path-breaking oature of our work, and the secood is the name and standing of Steveo Spielberg," he adds. "Our liability is

"I think there will be a temptation to keep the interviews going until we have reached the last living survivor, but that decision will also depend on funding and other factors," says Bereobaum.

For today's Technion: the sky's the limit

By JUDY STEGEL-ITZKOVICH

There are some high-flying professors at the mini-city that serves as the Technion's campus in Haifa.

Take, for example, Prof. Brian Silver, a usually down-to-earth chemist who appears in a multimedia show at the Technion's completely refurbished visitors' center. He appears, Mary Poppins-like but without an umbrella, floating behind a hovering lectern in a capsule built 10 look like the interior of a spaceship. With a snap of his fingers, scenes from any of the 19 faculties and departments on campus are presented on a large screen in the auditorium.

A visit to the new $1 million Alex Coler California Visitors' Center is a must for anyone planning to be in Haifa. The 10year-old building is located on the eastern edge of the giant campus. Technion management realized that the old exhibits, mainly printed pamphlets, were outdated for the 21st century. David and Janes Polak, along with other supporters from the California Group of the American Technion Society, donated the funds to transform the building. It is the only center of its kind in any Israeli academic institution.

There are computers linked to the Internet, by which visitors can cybersurf not only to the Technion's Web site (www.technion.ac.il), but to any site on the Net.

The center also bas a number of multimedia workstations where, in Hebrew or English, one may be introduced to the Technion through video film, sound, and text. The only thing tacking are earphones so each viewer can interact without disturbing other users.

The multimedia program, produced by Compugraphics Solutions of Givatayim, can also be viewed in the comfortable 130-seat auditorium, which is more pleasant than the average movie theater. Just outside, covering a large wall, is a speciacular aerial view of Israel positioned horizontally - the result of a detailed satellite photograph of

"We can personalize the pre-sentations," notes Wayne notes Wayne Firestore, the Coler Center's director. "Many groups are sent to us by the Foreign Ministry and the Ministry of Industry and Trade who want to know more about Israeli science and tecbnology. We can use the computer to greet the group personally as an integral part of the show."

Since its opening in June, thousands of people bave passed through the center, which is free and open Sundays through Thursdays from 8 a.m. 10 3:30

The multimedia show is based on a sophisticated digital system of compression technology, says Amir Zmora, the Technion's public affairs director. With beeping lights and cosmic sound effects, Prof. Silver, in bis "virtual studio," floats across the screen and "lands" in any of 286 predetermined sites in the 100 buildings on campus. Researchers raise their beads from their microscopes and scanners to talk about their work. Watching advanced graphics and zoom-in video film photographed from a helicopter, the viewer feels he is soaring over the campus like a bird. Each building is depicted as a three-dimensional computer drawing. With a click it comes to life in its actual setting among the trees of the Carmel.

Silver also introduces Technion president Prof. Zehev Tadmor, who personally greets the visitors. One gets the feeling that the learned president has taken time off from his busy schedule just to say hello.

Another high-flying Pb.D is Alfred Filzer, a communications engineer who immigrated from Leningrad and is now involved in the Techsat 2 project. Although he isn't suspended in midair like Prof. Silver, most of his thoughts are aimed at the skies - just like the antennae on the roof of his lab, which are positioned directly toward various satellites.

The Gurwin Techsat 2. which weighs less than 100 kilos but packs a powerful load of circuitry, is due to be dispatched by a civilian Russian missile company years ago failed when the military missile SS-25 crashed on takeoff, dashing years of work by Technion faculty and students. A 48-centimeter cube built to run on solar energy, the satellite in the Asher Space Research Institute lab looks unimpressive - but its capabilities and assignments in space will be remarkable.

The Israeli-made communications satellite should perform better and at only a fraction of the cost of American or European satellites. Filzer notes that it will serve as a platform for various experiments, including a firstever space experiment on hightemperature superconductivity. It will also study the clouds, monitor radiation, and examine the ozone layer. In addition, it will provide communications services to ham radio operators and carry a digital camera for remote sensing. The satellite should function 700 kilometers above Earth for two to five years. Since it is completely solid state (no moving parts), it will not require lubricanon. Containing gyroscopes, the satellite will be able to position itself in space automatically, says Filzer, who will fly to Russia to attend the launch. His feet firmly on the ground at "Applications jumped by 78% in just one year, and industry is desperate for well-qualified engineers. We accept only the best."

Every engineer can produce $1 million a year for the economy, he notes. "The productivity of an Israeli engineer is higher than that of a counterpart in the US; these statistics have been proven.'

Motorola, he adds, has 40 subsidiaries around the world, and every year it runs a careful assessment of their operations. "Motorola-Israel came out No. 1," says Ze'evi, some of whose graduates now work in that company.

There are 1,000 start-up companies in this country; more than in all of Britain, for example. "Not all of them will make it, as you med good marketing, for cham ple, at which Israelis do not always excel. The political situation is unstable. The Japanese, for instance, would love to do business with Israel, but they're waiting for peace. They don't want to worry about getting supplies because of a war, a closure, or tension. Since Israel's security is

In a recent article in Harefuah, the journal of the Israel Medical Association, the staff of the livertransplant unit at the Rabin Center-Beilinson Campus compared the results of transplants using five organs taken from older people and 28 taken from younger donors. Since January of last year, five patients have received livers from donors over 60. Although the liver could optimally be preserved for no longer than 7.8 bours instead of 10.2 bours for a younger organ, the livers functioned well months after the surgery.

This is an important finding, write the Beilinson doctors, given the severe shortage of organs available for transplants, especially livers. At a transplant center in Paris, only 4 percent of the donors were above the age of 50 in the late 1980s, but by 1994, the figure had risen to 20%.

At the same time, if livers from younger donors are available, they should definitely be pre-

Mohel tips the scales Jewish ritual circumcisors

(mohalim) seem to inflict less pain on infants than do most physicians, possibly because of the tools they use, according to a US researcher. In a Hartford, Connections, study published in Ob/Gyn News involving 48 newborn boys, the magen clamp used by mohalim was found to he much quicker to deploy and less painful than the Gomco device favored by most doctors. Boys circumcised with a magen clamp had less than half the heart-rate increase and total crying time of infants circumcised with a Gomco. Blood oxygen levels also were higher in the magen infants an indication that they suffered less stress, said Dr. Hema N. DeSilva, director of neonatology at St. Francis Hospital and Medical Center. The researchers concluded that infants should be anesthetized to reduce pain, no matter which clamp is used.

Rabbi Yehuda Lebovics, a Los Angeles mohel who has performed more than 10,000 circumcisions, commented that ritual circumcisors are much better trained for the procedure: "A mohel is used to working with a grandmother breathing down his ### standing water infiltrated by bacteria. Foul smells are a warning

By JUDY STEGEL-ITZKOVICH

Thy does the water in which cut flowers have been standing for several days remind me of the smell of bad (human) breath? Robbie.

Prof. Mel Rosenberg, a microbiologist and halitosis expert at Tel Aviv University's dental school.

Bad breath is produced by gases produced by bacteria on the tongue and in the teeth. The rotting smell of water in which cut flowers have stood also results from gases from bacteria as organic maner decomposes. Bacteria love water, where they multiply and emit gases. However, the types of bacteria involved in these two sources are

We've been programmed from ancient times to judge whether food and water are fit for consumption by their smell. It's a protective mechanism. So we consider gases produced by bacteria as a foul smell. These two smells don't seem similar to me, but they could to other people. Putting a bit of bleach in the water with cut flowers can prevent the bacteria from growing rapidly. but too much could kill both the bacteria and the flowers.

When I feel a sneeze coming, a quick look into a bright light has-tens it on, while a light massage along the nose prevents it. Can you explain this? Esther, Tel Aviv.

Dr. Michael Wolf, o senior otorhinolaryngologist at Sheba Hospital ot Tel Hashomer, explains:

It is true that strong light can although only rarely - be a trigger for a sneeze; at the same time, various techniques, such as massaging the nose or other parts of the face, can reduce the urge to sneeze. These phenomena involve reflex action, but research has not been done to explain exactly how this mechanism

Envelope mystery unsealed The factors that regulate the process of nuclear-envelope assembly in living cells have been described by scientists for the first time. This achievement was accomplished after years of work by a team of Hebrew University researchers headed by Prof. Yosef Gruenbaum of the genetics department. The team identified the proteins involved in reconstituting the nuclear envelope following cell division and have described how these proteins connect with others found in the membrane of the cell

Understanding this process is a significant step toward acquiring a full knowledge of the genetic processes in the cell and the arrangement of genetic material within the nucleus of the cell. This understanding, say the HU geneticists, will also help to decipher factors involved in the development of autoimmune dis-

During cell division (known as mitosis), the nucleus - including the nuclear envelope - splits apart. Reconstitution then occurs in the subsequent new cells that are produced. The decomposition and rebuilding of the nuclear envelope is a critical stage in mitosis. Although much has been learned about the structure of the cell nucleus and the process of cell reproduction, the process by which the nuclear envelope assembles itself remained a mystery. But the HU researchers managed to develop a system to reconstitute nuclei in embryonic extracts. They showed that two key proteins, lamin and otefin, are essential to the formation of the envelope.

The work was done using models based on the nuclear envelopes of fruit flies, which bear structural similarities to those of humans.

Twice a year, the American institute conducts tests to determine the quality of chemical labs that serve the waterquality system in the US. In 1966. the analytical ability of 137 labs around the world was tested. Each was sent five uniform samples and each was asked to test for 94 chemical substances at varying concentrations, down to parts per billion. The Geological Institute's labs, which are run under the aegis of the Ministry of Energy and Infrastructure, have highly advanced equipment. They are able to detect contamination of underground water, dust, beach pollution and the quality of rain-

Nasdaq sets high, Dow closes lower

New York

The Nasdaq market set a new high Friday as smaller-company stocks continued to draw money away from the blue-chip sector, which was jostled by more worries about third-quarter profits.

On Wall Street, the Dow Jones industrial average fell 44,83 points to 7,822.41. The blue-chip average was down as much as 81 points, but reversed course in the afternoon when the Federal Reserve publicly dismissed a rumor that Alan Greenspan, the respected chairman of the central bank, is seriously ill.

The blue-chips took an early hit after several prominent companies warned of disappointing results for the current quarter and Smith Barney, citing profit coocerns, downgraded consumer products giants such as Procter and Gamble, Colgate-Palmolive, and Gillette

P and G fell sharply as the Dow's weakest component, and the list of biggest decliners on the New York Stock Exchange was dominated by Tupperware, Boston Scientific and American Standard, the companies that issued profit warnings.

The earnings jitters quickly canceled out the initial relief over a report suggesting that upward pressure on wages - a key force behind inflation - remained fairly tame in August.

The Labor Department reported that the nation's unemployment rate crept up to 4.9 percent in August as new jobs were created at the slowest pace in nearly a year. Only 49,000 jobs were created as unemployment rate edged higher from a 23-year low of 4.8% in July. However, the report also showed mildly unsettling increases in hourly wages and the average work week. Government officials and analysts downplayed the data, noting the temporary impact of the UPS

Dollar mixed on Greenspan resignation rumor

NEW YORK (AP) - The dollar finished mixed against other major currencies Friday, falling against the mark despite getting a lift late in the day after Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan denied he was planning to resign.

The dollar was under pressure most of the day, partly because of the Greenspan rumors, but also on monthly US jobs figures that first were seen as encouraging for the dollar, but hurt the currency on closer inspection.

The dollar finished higher against the yen, which continued to suffer at the expense of the European currencies. The dollar lost ground against the Swiss franc after the Swiss National Bank president suggested higher interest rates were possible.

The effects of the Greenspan rumors, which in some versions raised questions about his health, were most evident when they were denied late in the afternoon. At about 2 p.m., a Federal Reserve spokesman issued a denial, which gave a lift to the dollar as well as stock and bood prices. A little more than an hour later, Greenspan issued a statement calling the gossip nonsense, boosting markets a bit more.

Europe

Europe's bourses beat a hasty retreat in choppy trade on Friday as US shares gave up gains inspired by jobs data initially viewed as good news for financial markets. Continental indices slid lower while London's blue-chip FTSE 100 index managed to close 2.9 points higher at 4,994.2, after givmg up an earlier 37-point gain trig-gered by news the US jobless rate rose to 4.9 percent in August, from 4 8% in July. "The market can't really go much further because valuations are looking quite stretched," said BZW strategist Steve Wright.

The nonfarm payrolls data showed the US economy added just 49,000 jobs in August compared with expectations of a 65,000 increase and an upwardly revised 365,000 m July.

Although traders took the figures to mean inflation was too weak to trigger a near-term rise in US interest rates, they took a more cautious view later because of the fact the August data was dampened by a 16-day United Parcel Service

The broadest UK market measure, the FTSE All Share index, rose 3.15 points or 0.1%, to 2,348.39, while the mid-250 index for once outperformed blue chips, gaining 17.4 points, or 0.4%, to

Asia

The outlook for Asian equity markets remains poor in the coming week, with local punters hoping for a Southeast Asian recovery but foreign investors staying clear after the wild gyrations of the past two weeks.

"It's getting much harder to comment on Southeast Asia," said Grant Forster, vice president at BT Fund

Managers in Hong Kong.
Things like [Malaysian Prime Minister] Mahathir about-facing on [trading] rules released last week. Indonesia bringing down foreign investment restrictions - the playing field is chopping and changing so

"Given these changes it's getting very difficult to react short-term. You'll get burt if you do that, and get hurt very quickly.

In an attempt to combat recent market turmoil, Malaysia lifted trading restrictions on short-selling of blue-chip stocks, while Indonesia cut rates and scrapped a 49-percent limit on foreign purchases of listed

The measures sparked a region-wide rally on Friday after two weeks of heavy losses and currency currency weakness. Local traders forecast continued strength next week.

But foreigners were less enthusiastic, warning that currencies remain key to equity performance in the short-term, and currencies are due to come under further pressure as con-cern mounts about funding of wide current account deficits, said Robert Rountree, regional strategist at

Nomura Research. "Discretion is the better part of value at the moment," he quipped. "I wouldn't want to bet the worst is

Patrick Wong, investment director at Jardine Fleming Unit Trusts, said the outlook will remain bearish until · currencies stabilize and cheaper exports give Southeast Asian economies a much-needed shot in (News agencies)

Gutsy reds topple Maccabi Haifa

By DEREK FATTAL

The astute tactical sense of Hapoel coach Eli Cohen combined with 3 gutsy performance by Shalom Tikva brought the reds a deserved three points, which swept the Haifaites off the table top.

From early on it was evident that Tel Aviv were going to give little away at the back. Only Maccabi captain Sergei Kandaurov seemed capable of troubling the Hapoel back line.

The Tel Avivans' spint was exemplified by an 18th-minute charge forward by Tikva who beat three men through sheer elegance rather than speed and power before laying off a pass to Felix Halfon whose shot was only just tipped clear by Nir Davidovich in the Haifa goal.

Hapoel went one better in the 42nd minute when a long pumped center from Ya'acov Hillel beat Haifa's half-hearted attempt at executing an offside trap and fell straight to Assi Donib who let the ball come down and bounce once before dispatching it with accuracy and power into the comer of the net. Giora Spiegel's men opened the second half in more determined fashion with substitute Hezi Shirazi thrown in to assist in attack. Kandaurov led by example hitting the crossbar in the 52nd minute, then forcing an excellent save off Shavit Elimelech.

Nevertheless Hapoel never lost their bearings, and continued to make careful use of possession. Injury resulted in Tikva leaving the game through injury in the 69th minute, but Maccabi made an uphill task far more difficult when Shirazi was deservedly dismissed for an vicious tackle with 19 minutes to go. A tense close saw Haifa's Golan Den hit the post with a fierce shot in the 87th minute. Seconds later, Arik Bennado headed into the Tel Aviv goal only to have referee Eyal Tsur disallow for an infringement to the joy of the Hapoel fans. At the other end, Hapoel then hit the post by way of reinforcing their claim to victory.

Bet. Jerusalem 0, Hap. Haifa 0 Despite a fine performance by Yossi Abuksis and a bumper 10,000 crowd. Betar failed to turn territorial dominance into goals. They were not helped by the decision of coach Dror Kashtan to leave last week's hattrick man, Nir Sivilia, on the bench, particularly with Eli Ohana not looking as sharp as usual.

Liron Bassis almost put the visitors ahead from an early corner, while Abuksis came close for Betar midway through the first half. Jeers greeted the Jerusalemites at the break after Serjan Chulakovic and then Bassis threatened to score for Hapoel in the run up to the interval.

Kashtan finally bowed to popular pressure, bringing Sivilia on during the second half. The game blew up with 20 minutes left on the clock with a clash between Betar's Tomer Azulai and Hapoel's Chulakovic that resulted in both players being sent Referee Meir Levy reached into his pocket for his red card again just five minutes later to send Alon Halfon marching to the dressing room for a foul on Sivilia.

With a one-man advantage, the champions brought massive pressure to bear in the closing minutes but were still unable to break down

Hapoel Jerusalem take over National League leadership

By AMMANJAH de YRIES

This weekend's National League soccer matches opened with a minute's silence io honor of the victims of last week's terrorist attack in Jerusalem and the eleven falleo soldiers in the failed commando raid in Lebanon. The soccer action itself brought a deluge of red cards - nine io total - and several upsets.

Maccabi Haifa were knocked off top position after a 1-0 defeat by Hapoel Tel Aviv (see Match Reports).

The team which moved into the lead is from Jerusalem, and it's not Betar. Hapoel Jerusalem took over as leaders after winning their away game against Hapoel Kfar Sava 2-1 on Friday. The Jerusalemites have an nobeaten record and lead Hapoel Tel Aviv by virtue of baving scored more goals. Sixth-place Ironi Ashdod also continued their nobesten run in a crushing 3-1 win over Hapoel Beershebe at bome. The loss comes at a bad time for Beersheba, as they prepare to face the Dutch team Roda JC in the Cup Winners Cup oo September 18th. Hapoel Petah Tikva, who travel to Austria to play Rapid Vicona in the first round of UEFA Cup, fared better. They beat Maccabi Petah Tikva 1-0 in the local derby, which, even before the kick-off promised to be a fierce battle. And io fact, Maccabi found itself playing the last 15 mioutes with only oine men after both Amiran Mogiri and Noam Casey were sent off. The only goal came from the penalty spot in the 19th mioute, taken by leading scorer Motti Kakkon after Walid Bdir was tripped in the

More red cards were baoded out as Betar Jerusalem battled Hapoel Haifa in front of 10.000 fans at Teddy Stadium. The match ended in a 0-0 draw as two Haifa players and one from the Betar side found themselves taking early showers (see Match Reports).

Ofer Levy of Maccabi Tel Aviv and Eyal Coben of Ironi Rishon Lezion also took the early, looely walk to the dressing room as their teams drew at 1-1.

Avi Nimni scored the first goal, a penalty, in the 45th minute after he was brought down by Avi Pitussi. Moshe Sabag equalized for Rishon eleveo minutes ioto the second

In a great contrast with the surprising success of Hapoel Jerusalem, Maccabi Tel Aviv now find themselves at the bottom of the table in one of the relegation positions after a dreadful start to the seasoo.

Further surprises came as Hapoel Ashkeloo and Maccabi Herzliya both pulled off long-awaited first wins of the season. Ashkelon beat their hosts, Hapoel Beit She'an, 3-1 on Friday after two losses and a Ashkeloo'a Kozloshvili was seot off early near the eod of the game.

Maccabi Herzliya also weot ioto their match against nintb-placed hosts Bnei Yebuda with two losses and a draw. Goals in the ointh and 34th minutes by Yaniv Cohen put the team shead, only to bave Boei Yebada come back to level by the 57th mioute (Shuki Nagar 37, and 57th Nissim

The winning goal came from the Brazilian Sierro Santos, who also assisted on Coben's second goal, in the 86th minute.

Rusedski reaches US Open final

NEW YORK (AP) — Big-serving Greg Rusedski celebrated his 24th birthday vesterday with the biggest present of his career - a benth in the US Open men's singles championship match. Rusedski became the first British male to reach the U.S.

final since Fred Perry won the title. in 1936 and the first to gain a Grand Slam tournament final since December 1977 when John Lloyd lost to Vitas Gerulaitis In the Australian Open.

The left-hander defeated Jonas Bjorkman 6-1, 3-6, 3-6, 6-3, 7-5, with the final point coming when he ripped a forehand down the line past his Swedish foe.

Owner of one of the biggest serves in tennis, Rusedski pounded out 15 aces and 13 service winners. He had a first serve timed at 142 mph, and one second serve — in a game in which he was leading 40-0 - at 228 kph (141 mph).

Rusedski's opponent in today's title match was to be decided in the later semi-final last night between second-seeded Michael Chang and

No. 13 Patrick Rafter.

On Friday, Venus Williams made US Open history as the unseeded American outslugged Irina Spirlea of Romania in a third-set tiebreaker to set up a Grand Slam final showdown against world No. 1 Martina Hingis.

The 17-year-old Williams became the first unseeded woman in the Open era to reach the final, saving two match points in a high anxiety tiebreaker before finally prevailing 9-7 for a 7-6 4-6 7-6 victory in a two-hour, 42-minute semifinal that turned into a grudge match.

The earlier semifinal was sweetness and light in contrast, as Hingis, 16, breezed into the final with a 6-2 6-4 sweep of sixth-seeded Lindsay Davenport in a match punctuated by smiles, laughs and a hug at the net at the end.

The Williams-Spiriea battle was more like war, but when it ended, the powerful black American teen sensadon let all the tension out,

After the 11th-seeded Romanian's backhand drifted wide on Williams's second match point in the decider, the 1.88 m Williams bounded up and down in joy, rattling her beaded braids and cutting loose an uncontrollable laugh that revealed the braces on her teeth.

Yevgeny Kafelnikov and Daniel Vacek added to their Grand Slam collection on Friday when they defeated the Swedish duo of Jonas Bjorkman and Nicklas Kulti 7-6 (10-81 6-3 in the men's doubles final of the US Open.

Kafelnikov, from Russia, and Vacek, from the Czech Republic, teamed for the French Open doubles crowns in 1996 and 1997, and this was their seventh title overall.

Australian top seeds Todd Woodbridge and Mark Woodforde, two-time defending US Open champions who were coming off a fifth consecutive Wimbledon title, were stunned in the first round by Tom Kempers and Menno Oosting of the Netherlands.

Lindsay Davenport and Jana Novotna spoiled the bid by Natasha Zvereva and Gigi Fernandez for a third consecutive Open crown by beating the top-seeded team 6-3 6-4 victory at Arthur Ashe Stadium.

Moroccans again ask for moving of Davis Cup tie

By HEATHER CHAIT

The Moroccan Tehnis Pederation has appealed for a second time to the international Tennis Pederation to move the Davis Cup tie against Israel from Ramat Hasharon to a neutral country, The fax sent to the ITF in London on Friday follows Thursday's terror attack in Jerusalem and the tense simution in Lebanon.

Last Wednesday, the ITF ruled that the original venue (Ramat Hasharon) for the tie, to be held September 19-21, would not be altered and that the ITP was satisfied that appropriate security considerations would be upheld.

Director General of the Israel Tennis Association Yair Engel, when informed of the new appeal, reiterated that the proper secu-rity arrangements would be executed and that Israel was not prepared to play anywhere except at Ramat Hasharon, The ITF's Management Committee is due to meet in New York tomorrow where the Moroccan request will be heard.

LAUSANNE (Reulers) - Former Olympic rowing medallist Anita DeFrantz became the most powerful woman in world sport on Thursday. The 44-year-old American, a bronze medaltist at the 1976 Montreal Olympics, became the first woman to be elected as a vice-presideni of the International Olympic Committee (IOC).

The IOC is a male-dominated body but DeFrantz has carved a successful career in the organization since she first became a member just 11 years ago. Some have suggested she might be a candidate to be president one day.

After the IOC session voted her into her new position by acclamation, the American said a woman could hold any post in the Olympic Asked if she thought it was time for a woman to take the top spot when Juan Antonio Samaranch steps down as IOC president in 2001, she said: "My election as a member of the IOC, to the executive board and now as vice-president proves that a woman is able to be elected to any position in the IOC.

"It proves that the Olympic movement believes in equality.

It is what you bring to the table. It doesn't matter whether you are a man or a woman....There will be more women."

The tall, radiant DeFrantz was

Athens wins 2004 Olympics

LAUSANNE (Reuters) Reality triumphed over romance on Friday when the International Olympic Committee (IOC) voted to award the 2004 Summer Games to Athens.

In the latest battle between Greeks and Romans, Athens trounced Rome in the fifth round of voting for the 2004 Summer Olympics after Buenos Aires, Stockholm and Cape Town had earlier been eliminated.

Delegates ignored the emotional appeal of Cape Town and the chance of staging the Games in Africa for the first time despite a speech of measured eloquence from South African president Nelson Mandela.

Instead Athens won a majority in each round with Cape Town forced to a tiebreak in the first round with Buenos Aires before surviving to the fourth.

The decision to return the Games to the country which founded both the ancient and modem Olympics was a personal victory for Greek lawyer Gianna Angelopoulos, who headed the Athens bid committee.

Athens relied heavily on sentiment in its quest for the 1996 centennial Olympics and Greeks were both upset and bitter when Atlanta was awarded the Games instead.

Angelopoulos, a 41-year-old lawyer who speaks five languages and who is married to a billionaire industrialist, concentrated this time on persuading the IOC that Athens was a modern European country fully capable of staging the world's biggest sporting spectacle.

The new Greece won today and we thank the members of the International Olympic Committee for this vote and for their confidence in us," she said.

Earlier, in a final presentation low on excitement but high on technical content, Angelopoulos directly addressed the question of Greece's competence. "We stand before you for the second time in a decade," she said.

Oarsman Redgrave wins sixth world title

AIGUEBELETTE, France (Reuters) - Briton Steve Redgrave, the most successful oarsman in the history of rowing, added a sixth world title to his record when he led Britain to victory in the men's coxless fours here yesterrday.

The 35-year-old Redgrave, who is aiming for a record fifth Olympic title in Sydney at the 2000 Games, his former coxless pairs partner Matthew Pinsent, Timothy Foster and James Bracknell clocked a time of 5:52.44 to win the race.

The British coxless fours are unbeaten this season and Redgrave himself has not lost a race since

Australians to coincide with the funeral service of the Princess of Britain's women's coxless fours also won their final. Susan Walker, Alexandra Beever, Elisabeth Henshilwood and Lisa Eyre beat Romania and Germany with a time of 6:40,30.

Australia won the men's lightweight eight in a very tense finish, beating Britain by just 0.03 seconds. with Canada taking third place within a second. The US also snatched two gold medals thanks to Sarah Gamer in the women's lightweight single sculls and the coxed pair of Scott Fentress and Jordan Irving.

Hosts France won the coxless pairs with Atlanta bronze medalists Michel Andrieux and Jean-Christophe Rolland beating Italy and the US.

*** ROSEANNA'S GRAVE - A surprisingly sunny film about death and dying, this is the tale of a simple but wellmeaning trattoria owner (Jean Reno) who lives with his beloved wife (Mercedes Ruehl) in a postcard-perfect Italian village where the cemetery has almost filled to maximum capacity. Roseanna is very sick and Marcello has embarked on a desperate campaign to keep the entire town alive and well so that, when the sad time comes, she might be buried in one of the last unoccupied plots. Unabashedly schmaltzy in places, the picture is, make no mistake, indefensible as art shot in a tooquaint-to-be-true style on location, the film features American, British and French actors speaking English in phony-sounding (and occasionally incom-prehensible) Italian accents, and Saul Turtletaub's script has a tendency to belly-flop into its stand-uproutine styled punch-lines. But the movie is charming in other, little ways. Reno's character is a singularly batty dark-comic creation, Ruehl is delightful as always, and director Paul Weiland demonstrates unusual warmth and sympathy for all the characters, whose sentimental situation is constantly being jogged just slightly by the story's wry twists and turns. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Parental guidance suggested.) *** BEAN — British comic Rowan Atkinson has lopsided eyes, big flaps for ears, almost no chin, and a sharp beak of a nose that slopes to a perilous point. His jaggedly disproportionate features seem expressly designed to help him make funny faces, and in the new film based on his popular TV character, he has ample opportunity to do just that. Bit for bit, Bean is constructed of some of the zaniest and most delightful physical comedy of the last several years, although attempts to recount this humor in words ("and then he puts 8 turkey in the microwave...") are bound to come up short, reducing the quirky comic logic of Bean's bearing to a laundry list of predictable and abrupt-sounding gags. Most of these routines, though, build gradually, ingeniously, through a care-

Tommy Lee Jones comes face to face with an alien in 'Men in Black.' tions, often of Bean to himself. Directed by Mel (The Tall Guy) Smith, and written by Richard Curtis and Robin Driscoll (both veterans of Mr. Bean, the film takes shape as a hyperbolic whirlwind tour of LA, where the very English Mr. Bean seems even more profoundly out of place than usual. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. General audiences.)

> *** MEN IN BLACK - Barry Sonnenfeld's playfully off-beat parody of the Martian-movie genre stars Tommy Lee Jones and Will Smith as nattily dressed officers in a top-secret agency designed to keep track of all alien life forms currently residing on planet Earth. The furniest thing about the film, which was written by Ed Soloman from a comic book by Lowell Cinningham, is its crisply matter-of-fact approach to good old worldly law and order. There's something at once knowing and rather resigned about the practical, slightly archaic way in which the MiRs go about their work - cruising their beat, drinking coffee from paper cups, pulling over alien-owned cars to check the driver's license and registration.... Clearly, the universe is too vast and mysterious a place to be policed effectively by a few deputized mortals in a gas-guzzling Plymouth. But the agents do what they can to keep the peace, and their actions come to seem logical in a loopy, deadpan way: of course there are Martians on the streets of New York. and of course someone high-up must know about it. The movie pokes gentle fun at conspiracy theories at the same time that it bonors them. With Linda Fiorentino, who doesn't have enough to do as a leggy coroner/damsel in distress. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Parental guidance strongly advised),

Mourners mark 25th anniversary of attack in which 11 athletes where murdered

MUNICH (AP) - German and Israeli officials marked the 25th anniversary of the massacre of 11 Israeli athletes at the Munich Olympics on Friday with a ceremony honoring the victims and calls for the continued push for Mideast peace.

Moumers gathered outside the Olympic village apartment house that Arab terrorists stormed on September 5, 1972. Besides the 11 Israelis, five anackers and a German police officer were killed after a 20-hour standoff ended in a botched rescue effort at the air-Casting a shadow over an already dark occasion, the anniversary came just one day after the suicide bombing in Jerusalem's Rehov Ben-Yehuda.

Anibassador to Germany Avi Primor called the Munich violence a symbol of terrorism against Israel and emphasized that violence has not and will not stop the peace process between Israel and the Palestinians.

German Foreign Minister Klaus

Kinkel echoed those sentiments.
"The Munich killings did not achieve their goal." Kinkel said in Bonn. "They could not stop the difficult path to peace in the Middle East."

The Munich attackers – eight terrorists from the Black September movement – had demanded freedom for 200 Palestinians jailed in Israel.

The Mossad methodically hunted and reportedly killed the PLO leaders responsible for the massacre, although the number of those killed is not known.

The PLO activist believed to have been responsible for planning the attack, Abu Daoud, was later sheltered by communist East Germany's secret service and lived there into the late 1980s. He now lives in Ramallah.

At the memorial ceremony, the widow of slain fencing coach Andre Spitzer criticized officials of both countries for not finding all those responsible.

"We will not rest until all those responsible are brought to justice," said Ankie Rekhess-Spitzer. She last saw her husband 25 years ago on television, when he appeared at the window of the Olympic village dormitory room, acting as a go-between for negotiators and the terrorists.

Hands bound behind his back, he reported in German that all the hostages were fine except for one – and was promptly hit on the head with a rifle butt and whisked from sight.

Also anending Friday's ceremony were former Munich mayor Hans-Jochen Vogel and the leaders of the national Olympic committees from both countries.

Ankie Rekhess-Spitzer, the widow of fencing coach Andre Spitzer, one of the 11 Israeli athletes killed in the 1972 Munich Olympics massacre, speaks during yesterday's 25th anniversary commemoration in Munich.

New technique enables 'sterile' man to impregnate wife

By JUDY SIEGEL

Jerusalem doctors have reportedly become the first in the world to produce an implanted embryo by "fishing" for individual sperm in the testicles of an infertile man, who bears an extra female sex chromosome.

The man, 29, and his wife, 22, who live in Beit Shemesh, underwent the unique treatment at Hadassah-University Hospital in Jerusalem's Ein Kerem. The man, A.

and his wife Orit Hayoun, were overjoyed to learn yesterday that doctors viewed the heartbeat of the six-week-old embryo that had been successfully implanted in her uterus.

The man suffers from Klinefelter's syndrome, an abnormal condition of male sexual characteristics in which the body cells contain one or more extra X chromosome. Normally, men have an X and a Y sex chromosome.

The characteristics of the syndrome include infertility and atrophied testicles, and the condition affects one out of 900 men. The more extra X chromosomes the person carries, the more severe the abnormalities, but Hayoun has only one extra.

An in-vitro fertilization unit team, headed by Dr. Aby Lewin and including Dr. Binyamin Reubinoff and Dr. Anat Safran, performed multiple fine-needle aspirations of Hayoun's testicles while he was under general anesthetic. They couldn't immediately see whether they had netted any sperm, but after nearly eight bours of examining material under microscopes, they found two sperm.

They were used to impregnate ripe ova taken from his wife, and they developed into two embryos. But because of the 50 percent risk of the syndrome being passed on to the offspring, the doctors removed a single cell from each of the embryos. Chromosomal tests showed that one was normal, while the other bore Klinefelter's syndrome.

After consulting with the parents, who asked that only the healthy embryo be used, doctors implanted that embryo in Orit Hayoun, who is now successfully pregnant.

Lewin said that "ours is the first clinical pregnancy resulting from the aspiration technique on an infertile man with this syndrome. We saw the amniotic sac on the ultrasound scan and a beating heart."

The team plans to report on its achievement in a medical journal.

Aloni backs national R&D council

By JUDY STEGEL

Former science minister Shulamit Aloni has endorsed Science Minister Michael Eitan's plan to establish a statutory national research and development council to direct basic research and set national priorities in the field.

Although a ministry statement issued Thursday implied that Aloni supported Eizan's entire plan, including closing down the ministry, Aloni said she bad not voiced her position on this issue.

"I didn't go into details," she said last week. The important thing, she added, is that an impartial, professional body would be given the status and responsibility for basic research, without political and other influences.

Be needed, she said; to coordinate among the international scientific cooperation agreements through the Foreign Ministry; applied scientific research through the Industry and Trade Ministry's Chief Scientist's office; and basic research at academic institutions and in industry.

Aloni said that she had initiated upgrading the existing National R&D Council into a statutory body with significant powers, and that the idea had been supported by her successor, Ze'ev Binyamin

Although Aloni said she favors having "a minimum of government ministries," whether the Science Ministry should continue to exist depends on what would be the result of a bill establishing an influential national R&D council. "If the proper council were set up, everything else is peripheral."

Last Wednesday, after less than two months on the job. Eitan shocked his staff with his plans to close the ministry down. The scheme has not yet been approved by Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu, Industry and Trade Minister Natan Sharansky, or Deputy Defense Minister Silvan Sbalom, who is due to take over as science minister in 10 months as part of a rota-

Rabbis try to block opening of Holocaust museum

By MARLYN HENRY

NEW YORK — A dozen Orthodox rabbis filed suit on Friday to try to block the opening of New York's new Holocaust museum, the Museum of Jewish Heritage, saying its exhibit bonoring homosexual Nazi victims offends Orthodox beliefs.

"The memorializing of homosexuals of the Nazi era is not only objectionable on religious grounds to plaintiffs. It wrongly memorializes Nazi-era homosexuals, who were prominent founders and leaders of the Nazi Party, wbo brutally persecuted Jews and who remained in high positions in the Nazi government until the end of World War II," according to the plaintiffs, wbo filed the suit in federal court in Manhattan.

The plaintiffs, including a dozen Brooklyn rabbis and two Roman Catholics from Queens, also contend that the use of public funds to commemorate only one religious group of Holocaust victims was unconstitutional.

A federal judge has scheduled a hearing for this week on the suit against the museum, which is scheduled to open on September 15. A spokesman for the museum, near Battery Park, had no comment on the suit.

HEBREW PRESS REVIEW ORLY AHAROM

Friday's papers responded to a dramatic week marked by tragedy and bloodshed both at home and abroad, even before the news of the deaths of 11 IDF commandos in Lebanon. The press focused on Thursday's triple bomb-attack in the heart of Jerusalem, which claimed four young lives.

In an article entitled "What will the future bold?" Yedior Aharonor's Nahum Barnea states that Israeli society is mature enough to bear the price of terrorist attacks. Barnea attacks Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu for turning Arafat into an enemy and withholding a concrete policy. He adds that despair is so deep that some Likud members are accepting this as inevitable. "Netanyahu is not to blame for terrorism or Arafat's manipulative nature. He is at fault for not providing hope." Ma ariv's Chemi Shalev states that Israel's persistent claim that Arafat is not fighting the terrorist infrastructure was proved "by the bloodshed of Israeli civilians." He adds that Netanyahu will use this attack in order to place terrorism and security at the top of Secretary of State Madeleine Albright's prionty list.

Ron Ben-Yishai of Yediot claims that the echoes of the attack on the Ben-Yehuda mall were meant to be heard in Washington. Hamas's main message is that it has the ability to torpedo any process of which it does not approve and, most importantly, negotiations should also be held with Hamas. Ben-Yishai adds that Arafat has received "a slap in the face" from Hamas, proving that the latter endangers his status more than it endangers Israel.

Ha'aretz's Ze'ev Schiff writes that cooperation between Israel and the Palestinian Authority is bankrupt, for Arafat has proved that be is nurturing terrorism. "There is no prospect for success in Madeleine Albright's planned visit," he concludes.

Diana

Marking the occasion of Princess Diana's funeral, Ron Miberg of Ma'ariv sums up the week following her death. He claims that a symmetry has finally been achieved after days of analysis: "Everyone of Diana's weeping fans has received his own villain."

sans has received his own villain," Sima Kadmon writes in Ma'ariv that grief united all social classes.
"What united them is the death of one princess and a few common adversaries: dissolute paparazzi, a drunk driver, and an impervious royal establishment."

In Yediot Aharonot, Anat Gov focuses on the worldwide love for the princess. She attributes this to the fact that "she took her destiny into her own hands and left her mark of benevolence on a merciless world."

Neeman under attack

Responding to harsh criticism of Finance Minister Yaakov Neeman's plans concerning the religious sector, the media attempted to present Neeman's

Nahum Barnea of Yediot states that Neeman has become the most popular man among the secular community: "No religious public figure has received such support from the secular sector since Yishayahu Leibowitz." Barnea also claims that Netanyahu knew that the struggle over the budget would create a great conflict with the religious sector, but believed that because Neeman is "one of them" he would be able to cope.

"What Netanyahu did not consider is Neeman's...attorney-style bluntness, his loyalty to himself. Neeman did not get into an argument over the budger, but into a 110-mile kph head-on collision."

A poll conducted by Dr. Mena Zemah for Yedior shows that support for Neeman's proposal is much more widespread than perceived. To his proposal that yeshiva students undergo one month of military training then become integrated in the work force, 25 percent of haredim expressed support, as did 61% of the religious sector, 71% of traditional lews, and 79% of secular Jews.
